An ability is something additive. Something extra.
Which is positive. And should not be dissed.

What makes that into a disability always in contrast to a stereotype which defines something as a standard of some sort.

Before we ate the forbidden fruit from the tree of knowledge we lived in paradise.

What does that really mean?

Well it means that we enjoyed ourselves and did not question ourselves. And from that inner environment we experienced paradise regarding everything else. That would be a definition of an experience called 'High on Life'.

What the fruit from the tree of knowledge means is rational thinking which is necessary for technological advancement & development. But we can still live in paradise if we affirm ourselves by our true nature finding gratitude for ourselves and everything around us.

We all dream our existence to become. It doesn't matter who you are it's simply how everything works. So for someone less rational which often is defined as someone with a cognitive disability is actually someone with a great universal advantage.

And listen to this:

Not just for themselves.

We are God. And what we dream of becomes a mutual experience worldwide.

People like this in my opinion should be put to use. If you engage with someone of this nature and talk with enthusiasm about wonderful things happening they see images and dream about them with less cognitive interference than for someone rational whom is questioning things.

They are a source of creation.

I believe with most certainty that a group of these individuals dreaming of peace makes a greater subconscious impact with much combined power like an emotional mastermind and will affect our mutual experience.

For someone rational this makes no sense.
For someone not spiritual.

Because they don't see how energy gets affected and only looks at physical action as to make things happen. That is also true but it comes from intention, thought & emotion. The visualization. The dream. Of love.

How it all sorts out and becomes in the physical world is all matter.

It will be what it will be.

But nothing ever happens without a loving dream.

When we discard this we work like crazy trying to sort everything from the outside in. Which is completely contradictory to the nature of universal creation given the order of how things are created as in manifested.

If you consume mushrooms your judgemental cognition is passive yet your are intact as to experience everything in relaxation. Which could be defined as a wake state of dreaming. Lucid.

In this state which isn't a state at all you truly feel that anything is possible.
And that is actually everything you need.

Because that is faith.

With faith there is no rational questioning.
You believe that anything can happen at any time.
With a relaxed joyful positive expectancy.

Some people are there all the time.
Without mushrooms.

As they have this ability.

This addition.

This God given ability intended to be used for a greater good.

They don't have to work really hard?
They don't have to push themselves physically?

All they gotta do is dream.
And be in the feeling of joyful expectancy.

And that's an order.

That's how you order but not boss around.

Which is more of a grateful and loving request.
And the universe responds.

All creation is a manifestation of a previously heartfelt dream.

If you instruct yourself to dream about things you wish would happen they eventually come to pass. If these individuals are a bit unfocused regarding this I believe that in a group setting they can be put to use.

Do you feel me?

If they see themselves as disabled they will make this ability into a problem?

A completely rational individual is far from spirituality.
A completely abstract individual is all spiritual.

We need a little logic as to have some form of structure.
But they abstract which is the emotional which is the spiritual which is the dreamy is what we need the most.

Everything is alright when we're having fun!

When it's not fun anymore it's not alright.

When we constantly judge everything we do it's not fun at all.

We can do anything which is fun and pleasurable without judgement.

And this should happen in a relationship getting closer which cannot develop as in getting closer without less and less judgement. Eventually not judging at all.

In relation to oneself and later together.

Being free and relaxed together.

Doing everything together as good friends.

Which will not ever happen not in a relaxed feeling of trust and consent.
Which means we judge what we do and therefor question ourselves and do things anyway which in actuality becomes going against ourselves.

I believe that's more about doing something for someone else just to feel affirmed.

But as we affirm ourselves we do not judge ourselves and go along with life with ease, just doing more of what we actually feel like doing.

So what's important is to not build a cage around yourself and expect to live a life feeling free. That's not gonna work. All of this becomes one huge orgy when we constantly think about sex. And it becomes very creative collaborations when we focus on love.

But sex is also perfectly alright.

If people wish to have sex in consent then have sex.

It doesn't have to be such a big deal.

It's consensual sex for pleasure.

There is nothing wrong with that.

And it doesn't mean further responsibility as in relational commitment.

Unless the desire for that is the reason for the sexual engagement from the beginning which is then action based on lies.

Don't judge.
Do what you want.

But don't bullshit.

Don't lie.

TO YOURSELF.

Be honest in relation to your ambition.
Why are you doing things?

What is your need?

If you feel like you need sex because it's pleasurable and enjoyable?
Or do you need sex because you need love?

Very very different.

One of those hurts both.

Which one feels like fun?

Which one feels like desperation?

I am very abstract as an individual. But I am also logical to some extent and wish to wrap things up. So right now from where I started to write and where I am right now I need to pause for a bit and wrap this up? Where am I going with this. What is coming thru?

Life is all about: Yes!

When you feel like: Yes!

With joy!

Like Yes! Yes! Yes!

Then..

What's the problem?

If you do things and don't feel like that all in joy..

Something's not right.

Like doing anything really.

Not just sex.

What is important here is to understand that we get what we give.

Watt.

So doing a bunch of stuff in judgement continuously questioning ourselves makes for doubt in what we're doing. And this confuses us like crazy. Because we do what we are supposed to enjoy but tell ourselves it's not alright?

All our own creation.

And as we are the universe experiencing itself we make it a very confusing experience.

So what makes all experiences good is to feel good about yourself and do whatever makes you feel good without judgement. Which is not sex with anyone anyhow.

We wish to live in a world of love.

Not in a world of sex.

For that to happen love needs to be free of sex.
And sex needs to be free of love.

Which means that love can turn into very loving sex.
And sex can be pleasurable without any loving commitment.

Both of those in relation to:

SEXUAL MATURITY

In our dreams anything can happen without any consequences.

But in the physical reality it's extremely different.

Depending on what is moral and healthy. How we perceive ourselves. And what we give ourselves in relation to what we actually need.

Or else we make things into abuse.

And we satisfy needs as to pleasure something we need in relation to ourselves.

All we truly need is love.

The, Yes! Yes! Yes!

Can be ecstatic feelings of joy as the children sing.

That's heart connectivity.

So it depends on where you hang out the most inside yourself.

In your head? In your pants?

Or in your chest?

When a sexual engagement happens which is not healthy is actually universal attraction. So both individuals are at the same place. And what they need instead of having sex is actually to take a walk and talk about their individual self perceptions. From that they will understand themselves for each other and become better friends.

With each other yes. But in relation to themselves.

Because a really good friend is a good friend with themselves.

Or else they use each other.

And that's not good for either one of them in relation to themselves.
When neglected and continued like this it makes for more confusion.

With more incorrect actions.

Trying to fulfill the need of love (neglect) but momentarily satisfied with something superficial.

Everything is alright in joy!

Anything. In consent. When mature.

Feeling good.

We have rational and logical structure about us as human beings.

But we also have instinctive needs.

What is morally correct is always about what is not hurtful.

And that's not even touching the physical.

Literally.

It's about feeling.
Heartfelt connection.

And from there as this connection is of most importance.

We don't do destructive things.

Like going against ourselves for a brief superficial pleasure.

So the wrap up:

To be entirely abstract like anything goes is not alright.
It makes for very destructive behaviors in relation to innocence.

And it hurts love.

Which we is.

So we hurt ourselves.

In spirit.

But we need it the most. The abstract.

For innovation and loving dreams.

So it's crucial to separate sex and love.

And it's very important to take love serious.

But not ourselves as a person.

From this communication a universal response happens.

And this means that you are ready.

To receive what you dream of.

Truly. Madly. Deeply.

In relation to soul.

Which cannot be sick.
Depressed. Or in need.

Of anything but itself.

As clear as possible.

And what happens is that you simply reflected your own light as things manifest from your own honest and mature relationship with yourself. I design myself to become my predestined version. Self made in collaboration with everything.

There is no such thing as positive stress.

Ever.

It's called enthusiasm and challenge.

Stress leads to brake.

Stress is all negative.

Which is all about attitude.

Joy does not stress.
But can hurry as to prevent destruction.

Which can be very stressful.

And makes for personal sacrifice.

Taking bullet after bullet in the head and heart.

For years.

As to set things straight.

I will not stress anymore now.

Please experience everything created like 'Oh my goodness'.

Because that's all it is.

I go for mine.

EY!

I'm good.
