

What if?

We reduced friction instead of trying to correct negative consequences?

What if we lived in accordance with the universe and the astral calendar instead of trying to take control over nature. I am not an expert on this. But a new year sprouts as far as I'm concern in relation to everything else coming alive.

So the calendar of 13 months / 28 days each month with the start in spring is something I know will benefit all. We are trying to coarse correct whilst living with a self created resistance in relation to a foundation of naturally mutual harmony together with all of creation.

If we try to find these respiratory functions to save us all and make it work with new obstacles to cover the basics all the time then why not look at the basic functionality of a universal creation and align with it?

No. Let's make a new model. Better than the universal creation! Says the idiot.

Summer and wintertime = Crap

Don't play God in person.

Julius Caesar was a fuckin moron. Control freak. With a large number of suckers around him. Just like any configuration of going against nature. Going against nature in its foundation is not destroying the rainforest. It's not living in relation to the planets alignment and natural flow of energy which is never gonna budge, never gonna change, and actually works together with us which we can benefit from if we team up.

There is a non-conceptual & non-judgemental conscious and aware energy that creates the entire universe and holds it intact in absolute perfection which is a play of light reflection presenting an illusion of space and time all in relation to solidity created by gravity and pressure which you currently experience in everything you experience.

God knows. God is perfect. God is not human. God does not have an identity. God just is. Cannot die. Exist forever. Becomes more of itself without being visible. Maybe its a good thing to play along? To set our watches to Godmode? To live here and now. With a false calendar we are chasing tomorrow or grieving yesterday. The electromagnetic push pull is all perfect. If we live offset then pain comes as a consequence. Affecting the environment and society as we live off grid.

By choice. Like moronic idiots. Trying to solve time travel? Which is impossible when all is now and always will be.

/ Let's just do it.
