

RETURN OF DA LIGHT

STAR WARS

COMMON INTEREST

Look at these books right here. It's The Quran, The Bible, Bhagavad Gita, The Never Ending Story & A book about letting go. All of these books have a common interest. Which some present better than others. No-one is better than anyone else. But they all try to talk about the very same thing which is:

Universal Creation

And if I could snap my fingers like a magician and in a second they'd all be gone. Not as in the visual field but as in no longer existing. Universal creation would still exist. Because this is something that happens by the power of God. So none of the books are necessary for God. God doesn't need anything at all. God only needs God. And God is 100% non-conceptual & unconditional love. What is missing in all of these books is a clear explanation of 'The Law Of Attraction'. Which just so happens to be ALL about Universal Creation. When I have written everything existing on transmutation.se I have felt scared from time to time. What has frightened me is not success as in joy. The fear is ultimately about you. Regarding your tight hold on your specific ideology which becomes threatened by light. We are all made of stars. We are star quality. We are soul beings having a human experience. And we have free will. Freedom of choice. In relation to personal responsibility. Which is about moral and conductivity in relation to what is constructive in nature all reflecting love. So a comprehension of love is very much needed which in nature is the comprehension of God. We are all God.

By heart and soul.

If we fail to recognize this we try to control and dominate which is actually us being controlled by the rational mind, the ego. Which is stagnant and rigid and feels uncomfortable when pressured into giving up an idea. A stack of ideas held for a long time becomes an ideology. As manifested in creation it can draw a crowd and receive a following. And the ideology has now become a religion. The presentation of Jesus is about a person whom was realized as a divine being. And tried to tell others they could also realize themselves. For somebody holding on to an ideology based on control coming from an identification with the rational mind (the ego) and not soul will become offended all in relation to their strong ideas. And what they truly seek is to become realized themselves as this is true to nature.

But fails to understand that nature, love, God, Universe. Is the same thing. And instead makes this into this realized individual (Jesus in this case) behaving in opposition trying to destroy them. Which in a passive state is not possible without truth. If somebody destroys you as in relation to making you question your ideas, your ideology, your religion. From simply sharing something universal which is not an opinion? There is something wrong with those ideas. Or gravely misinterpreted.

We might think that we live in peace to some extent and in other places there is war happening. But that's a superficial manifestation of what happened prior to this inside the human beings responsible or irresponsible. Because love does not kill.

And this is the real definition of Star Wars.

Because we can identify as the rational mind, the ego. Or we can identify as soul. The first being false. The second being true. In nature. To nature. Universally. Which for a human being in all about perception. And from the inside out. Which becomes and is perception of self. Which can be false or true. In nuance. Like this:

The almost completely dimmed but with great confidence becomes a dictator. The shaded one is perhaps somebody having a bit narcissistic. And the bright shining star is someone who is identified and self affirm as a soul being. The ego star is a dark star. Which is not evil. It just does not understand itself. The shaded one has received some insights about what love is actually about in relation to themselves. The bright thing star does not question love in relation to themselves. So in relation to Star Wars like in the movie, the ego one is Darth Vader. And the bright shining one is Luke Skywalker. What makes for insight and awakening that leads to realization is like Yoda. And Yoda knows. He's a master of his Universe. And is able to see potential. Why Darth is struggling to breathe is from tension. This tension is caused by the internal conflict of fighting himself in opposition to his true nature.

He can give that up and live in joy with everyone else and never had to destroy Alderaan. But in a way it became necessary as he invested so much in creating to support his false ideas. His ideology. His personal religion. Why he destroyed Princess Leia's home planet was because it hurt him the most. For what he was looking for in all his destructive behavior was to be like her. But not as a woman in a physical form. He wanted to be love. But was probably given a lot of destructive control from Darth Senior growing up which made him angry and frustrated. And also very competitive as to destroy the competition in the entire Universe. But as you can hopefully see? He was looking to destroy his false self perception. He was mad at himself. His circumstances. His history of neglect. His being pushed around and controlled disabling him to eventually be able to breathe from all that pressure in performing. So what was he trying to perform then? Well..He was trying to prove himself right. When in actuality he was not wrong - But he was left. The left side of the brain is the masculine, rational and logic side. Which becomes an inner environment that is unnatural for a humane being. This is not the same as male. So what he needed all this time was to embrace his emotions. Which is his feminine side. The right side of the brain. The Ego connects to the left side. The heart connects to the right side. Both the Ego and the Heart is in the middle of the body.

And the difference as to create an awakening is to firstly understand what you are and not who you are. Who you are is changing. Always. For some more for some less. Which is all about holding on or feeling excited about change. And that creates transformation. So who we are is love. We are soul beings having a human experience. Then we have a body which includes a mind, a personality.

And this is the ultimate and most foundational common interest for all soul beings. Which makes for a peaceful world of love filled with art and opportunities. Filled with innovation and wonderful creation. Just like Darth created but in the opposite end going backwards instead of forward in life. So instead of peace he created war. And instead of colorful art he created grey machines designed to kill. And tried to make it impossible for everyone to just live. So there is a great deal of innovation and creation in that too. But not very constructive. And as this goes against nature which is God, which is love, which is always expanding and becoming more. It came to an end. As this was his dying wish. All for his own dark self perception in misunderstanding of his true nature. So his wish came true. From a false sense of self. Which is not what he truly wanted at all. Because a realized human being is true to themselves and dreams of more life! And wishes for all to live as much and as good as possible which is clearly the opposite of what Darth spent his days working for.

Some might say: Well! I'm not a star! I don't sing, act, rap, etc.

But that is only a stereotype of pop culture expression. You can become a star in whatever field you like. Even one that does not quite exist yet. And that's true innovation. Doing what you dream can contribute in nuance as to wake people up and to help out in humanity becoming realized.

Just image this!

There are multiple worlds in the universe. Absolutely. And some might have solved this issue for perhaps 5000 years ago. They live in relation to the universal laws. As they comprehend creation. Because all creation happens the same way. It's intention. Thought & Emotion. Manifestation. From a perception of what is universal in relation to freedom all reflecting love. As love is free. So that would make our current state of development despite having touchscreen devices in our pockets about 1 year of their 5000. All from being stubborn as to compete with our true nature which is all from within projected out as we are the universe, nature, God, Love.

This is what the universe and all the support is all about. Which comes to us when we have this intention. It makes your brain think as to make this clear and creates emotions being communicated as to receive more to make it clearer. And then we share that. And when it becomes experienced it awakens. And from that awakening we become aware. When we are aware we find it more difficult to do wrong. And instead we transform and change our behavior and begin to do right. Because it makes us feel good. It makes others feel good. And that's what life is all about. Enjoying it. Not fighting it.

We live in different timezones but there is only truly now. One way to solve that tension is to not create friction in relation to nature. So by living in accordance with the universal laws and astrology we even the foundation and live from the same ground setting. Like in relation to the one closest to this despite culture celebrating new years at the same time. All other creations made from not doing this are respiratory actions as to try and win over nature by creating balance in relation to universal perfection. Why do that? Well..It's man trying to prove himself superior by acting God in mind. God is all giving. All love. And actually superior forever but without any competition and condemnation. No submission or control. Love handles all business in peace and simply waits for the dust to settle. And from that smog eventually no longer existing.. There it is. The life giving sun.

Which is what Darth was trying to escape from by living in a metal ball of cold steel in the vacuum of empty space. Because that's how he felt inside. Empty and hollow. From not affirming his true nature. Poor. In love. But rich materially. He made it happen. He dreamt his creation to existence. And from his devotion to his cause given his dark intention he almost won. But someone like him will never win. Because nature always succeeds. Love conquers all. By just being superior.

There is no possible way to go against this.

So it's highly recommended to instead go with this.

To join the light.

What Darth was is a product of his environment which was full of sick behaviors. Which made him confused. He felt hurt and angry. As he grew older he could have made the choice to ask himself why? And what he could have done to change?..

But he held on. And did what he did.

Why?

Because a false sense of self in dark perception can only prevail as long as the hurt and anger is being affirmed in relation to oneself being subjected to it on purpose. That's called a victim mentality. From asking himself and doing a bit on self inquiry he would have come to a greater understanding. From that greater understanding he would have forgiven. Not accepted. But forgiven. As he would have been able to see why things happen and that they are not evil in nature. It's from actions performed by people just like he eventually became. That could have done the same thing is I just explained.

He and his ancestors seriously needed to give it up. The affirmed false sense of self that is. And from that with all of that dark perception experience they'd probably would have become a great asset for Alderaan instead of blowing it up.

- Why are you talking about Star Wars? That aint real life?

Yes it is. This is what all art is about. This is why we create. As to awaked. To inform. To create insight. Helping us individually to realize ourselves and also as a race of human beings living on earth. The paradise treated like garbage. From people trying to conquer this and that. Running around acting mini Darth's all over.

What I speak of is not fiction. It's very much reality. If you can't see that simply means that you are very rational and logical in your comprehension over your own true nature of being a humane being which comes naturally as you affirm and identify correctly. What makes for a very ego identified individual to struggle with his is achievement and performance. Because they are subjective to being in relation to what they're doing. And from the perspective given no objectivity they make their entire existence into incorrect in contrast. Which is narcissistic behavior.

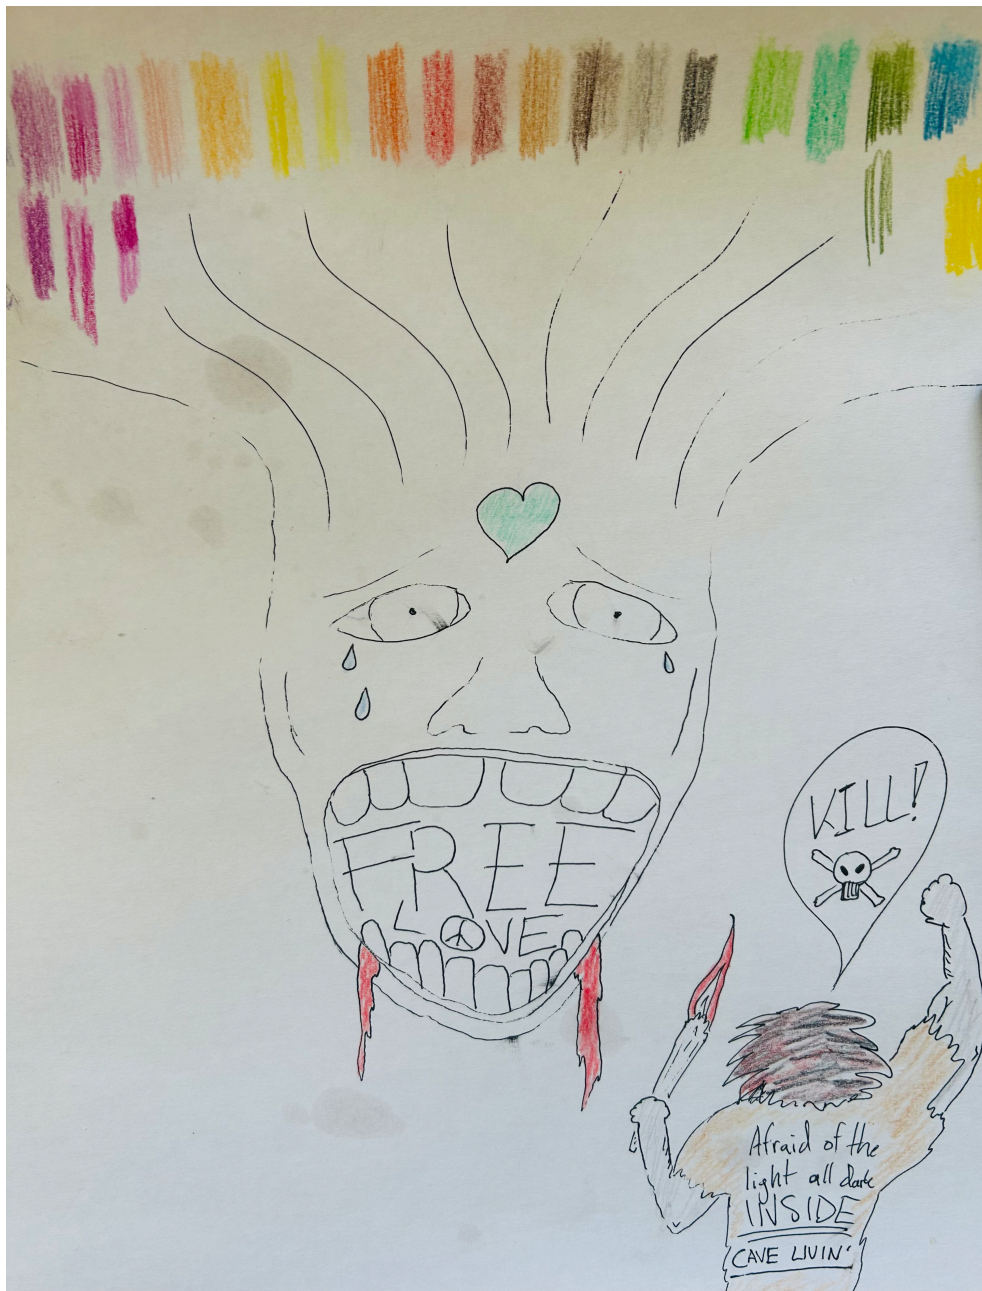

This leads to blaming and condemning. All from judgement. Which is poor judgement of self projected onto others from lack of personal responsibility. And that is all about humility as to have a relationship with self, soul, God, Universe. Asking what's the real deal is? Why am I behaving destructively? Why am I hurting, cheating, stealing and behaving cold with laser sharp competition in relation to my own salvation? This is something a destructive human being really should ask themselves.

From doing this change is coming. Transformation happens. And you begin to become. Perhaps from the depths of hell? In your own perception. As you realize just how dark it it's been for quite some time. But it gets brighter as you stay dedicated and teach yourself in relating to everything and eventually you become a shaded star to some extent. Like the awaking one in the middle. And after some time you comprehend a great deal about 'Universal Creation'. Which makes you feel like true to your own nature. Which is now clear in perception and thus makes you naturally without effort - A bright shining star! If Darth did this he would have transformed into his son of light. The Skywalker.

But as a victim he was full of vengeance with a capitol V and faded away. A dark sense of self affirm vader. A Fvader. Dark. Fvader.

By choice. I feel for him. Even though he created a lot of destruction. I feel his hurt.. Do you feel his hurt? Can you see where it came from and why things became what they became? It's not hard. It's easier when it's fictional like in a movie right? But that's life. It's a Star Wars movie with us in it! And some try to blow up Alderaan with themselves living on it? That's how hurt they are. That's how controlled by their own minds they are. All from not affirming their true selves. All from not being true to their true nature. That's terrible. And if it wasn't for this unbalanced competitive behavior in relation to the universal laws things like this would not exist. Evil as in a Nuke destroying 80% of the planet would in that perspective and universal alignment be someone taking the last butter and forgetting to go to the store and get some more for everyone else. True story.

Look at this picture:

Why would someone try to kill love all in control? If not in fear. I believe the greatest challenge living as a human material being is simply the fact that when we close our eyes being alone with ourselves all we see is dark. So it makes for a challenge as to affirm what is light in relation to the core of our being. But you see if someone is standing in pitch black dark and light appears? It freaks them out! They will be very much afraid. Because it's unfamiliar. We fear what we do not know. And if you behave destructively you do not know love. And need to come closer and feel it with fear. And from that you will realize that love is not hurtful. Except in a false representation which is all about personal gain. That's using love like in abusing love. That's why intuition and feeling things out is very important.

And that is actually you connecting to your true nature. You cannot be mad at love. Love won't have that. Love does not care if you are angry at it. Love is all joy. God is all love. And when we say that God will "make them pay" as in relation to an enemy that is not really true. We all get what we deserve. And what we deserve is in relation to our own conductivity. Which in behaving negatively and very destructively is all love as it shows us in pain and loss how wrong we were about what is all giving and all loving. That's a sudden fall to the knees in humility in relation to the supreme force creating the entire universe. Asking for forgiveness.

And you are always forgiven. God cannot judge or punish.

You do this all in relation to yourself. By holding on to that dark star perception and never changing. Which is impossible without relating in humility as to ask what you can transform about yourself and your own conductivity as to become more realized and true to your true God given all loving nature.

It's all energy. Energy in motion. E-Motion. Color. With a hint of structure. A little framing. A painting at a museum is not 5% artwork of color and 95% frame? Do you understand that metaphor? If not I suggest you ask to teach yourself about it.

To comprehend creation. Importance. Love. Freedom. And salvation.

Redemption is right around the corner. Always! All you gotta do is ask. Be humble and grateful. Ask to understand more. And it is given.

This will make you more aware. More awake. And brightening your perception.

From a brighter perception you feel better and do better. Like writing something like this and sharing it. As to make a world of love. As intended. And help in correcting a false idea. Preventing paradise to be experienced before we leave this planet.

This will make for more possibilities. Like flying across continents to meet and experience more of the world including people and sceneries. Like walking in the sky. Honoring other soul beings! As you actually don't know who they are and their specific destiny. So instead of competing with them you become inspired. As to grow and expand forever. As this is all what a soul being is about.

Feelings of discomfort can be experienced as claustrophobic. Inside this human being. Which is understandable as the soul is naturally free. And this makes for a challenge as to come out. As your true self as much as possible. Which is of great satisfaction close to heart and close to love. And not about anything else. The reward is automatic in relation to being authentic. Because the soul is the light in the dark calling you which is nothing to be afraid of and leads you to a given victory without any competition whatsoever.

This is what I'm here for. This is what you're here for. We are on this planet as to assist in the expansion of love. When not participating in this we hurt as we neglect our calling. And from this we numb ourselves. We hurt ourselves. We hurt each other. And do the exact opposite until we mature and wise up. Coming to a comprehension of our own false sense of self actions manifested as guidance telling us we are going the wrong way. We can't go backwards in time. Because time does not exist. So holding on to history is trying to recreate history. And we suffer once again. By our own refusal to let go.

Fantasia is almost lost until the human boy gives the princess her new name. Because we believe in her existence to be real. Which is a metaphor for affirming love. And everything gets restored. That's what The Never Ending Story is all about. Love needs to be affirmed as it is unconditional. The demons are self created if affirming them to be real.

So what's your choice? Really? What do you choose to do with your limited once in a lifetime experience on earth? All in relation to yourself and then everything else just works. Conflicted inside = War. Compassionate realized inside = Peace.

Simply as that.

Everyone is God. We are God. So what you maintain and sustain inside you is either allowing or blocking the sun. You see we don't need to create peace and love. It just is. When affirmed. Or we walk around like clueless sleeping victims and bring clouds of great pressure making it difficult for everyone else. Globally. Yeah..

We create this experience together. We are all connected. What is being judged and not forgiven in a greater understanding becomes karma. Which we all deal with as to understand ourselves and each other. So the best is to not judge at all. Which makes for no condemning either. We aim to understand, heal, release what is holding us back. And receiving what is coming. Which is our mutual and common destiny. Religion is either a knife cutting bread or bodies. By choice.

Thank you. / Leo

When you pray to God and receive what you need you are receiving from your own subconscious mind which is without boundaries so in reality connected to everyone else. As pure loving energy cannot be divided or separated. Which makes us one. We all truly wish for the same thing. Which isn't a thing. It's for love to be free. The ego structure is a closed personal environment. Which needs a personal relationship with the all giving power = Humble before God.

We don't wanna divorce from one another. But we need to separate from our false sense of self and realize our true nature.

Which brings us closer to all we need.
Bringing us closer together.

We are God.

'Howls Moving Castle - Theme'